Eearly Sunday morning, Charles Weinphal, who lives at Perch rock, just south of Thamesville, discovered the body of a man in the eddy back of the Perch rock breakwater. Medical Examiner Dr. R. W. Kimball was motified and saw the body. He gave Church & Allen permission to remove it and it was taken to their rooms.

The body had been in the water for some time, the indications being that it was for about two months. The features were not recognizable, and there was nothing on the body which would lead to identification. Dr. Kimball stated that everything indicated that he was a tramp, inasmuch as he was evidently dressed for warmth, having had rwo shirts and a sweater on besides his dark clothing. He wore a celluloid collar and a necktle and had a good pair of shoes.

The man was five feet two inches in height, solidly built and about 50 years old, it was judged. There was nothing in the pockets which would give a clue to his identity. The body will be ouried today.
